1. Policy Purpose

To ensure that informed consent is obtained in a language that is understandable by potential research participants.

2. Policy Statement

Translation of informed consent documents that reflect the study population that the PI wishes to recruit for participation is required at all review levels. If the PI does not employ a certified translator, they must provide evidence in the form of a statement about their level of proficiency in the language and their experience in translating documents from English into the foreign language relevant to a study population. They must attest that they are the individual who translated the informed consent document(s), and that they have the expertise to do so. At the time of IRB submission all consents and relevant study documents must be submitted in English. Translations of IRB-approved documents must be submitted as an amendment.

3. Definitions

Proficient [regarding translations]: The ability to translate documents well due to education, training, experience, and practice. An advanced knowledge of the language the document is to be translated to as well as an advanced knowledge of the language to be translated from. Proficiency requires an in-depth cultural knowledge including understanding cultural idioms, and the ability to communicate effectively in writing as demonstrated by knowledge of grammar rules, punctuation rules which may differ in foreign languages.

Certified translator: An individual who has passed a certification exam to verify their translation skills.

Certified translation: One where a translator or another reviewer provides a [written] statement, in addition to the translated document. The statement which includes:

- A statement of the translator's qualifications.
- A statement affirming the completeness and accuracy of the document.
- Identification of the translated document and language.
- The translator's name, signature, and date.
